- A. It is able to automatically route the conversation to another digital assistant if the request can't be handled by the current digital assistant.
- B. It is able to respond to a user request to exit the current conversation.
- C. It is able to respond to a help request and return a help message, one that can be specific to one of its skills, or to the digital assistant itself
- D. It is able to route the conversation to the start state of a skill that's managed by the digital assistant.

Answer: D

Question No. 5

How does a digital assistant determine which skill to route user input to?

- A. It evaluates all of the user input against one consolidated training model based on the utterances for each skill to determine the candidate skills. Then, it evaluates against the training models for the candidate skills and resolves to the intent with the highest confidence score.
- B. It evaluates all of the user input against the individual training models for each skill, and then it routes to the intent with the highest confidence score.
- C. It evaluates all of the user input against one consolidated training model that combines all of the intents, and then it routes to the intent with the highest confidence score.
- D. It routes to the skill that is activated most often.
- E. It always routes to the currently active skill.

Answer: C
